

17th June 2011 - A previously unrecorded burial ground was found on private land in Rush, near Rogerstown Estuary. The project archaeologist and osteoarchaeologist have informed the National Monuments Service and the National Museum.

A methodology statement for an archaeological survey has been submitted to these authorities for approval.

It is expected the archaeologists will be given the go ahead from the authorities to commence the survey in the coming weeks to determine the extent of the burial ground.

A report will be issued to the National Monuments Service and the National Museum for them to determine what further actions will be undertaken.
